Design and production of an immobilized glucose oxidase column as a high-resolution biosensor. An amperometric enzyme column prepared by immobilizing glucose oxidase (GOx) on porous nitrocellulose filters was assembled as a high-resolution biosensor to perform analytical measurements in flowing solution. The response of the enzyme column was highly sensitive (e.g., 32% S.D. in a 10% response time) and required very small sample volumes. The practical limit of the biosensor was found to be about 400 microM H_2O_2, but the column response continued to grow as the H_2O_2 concentration was increased up to 10 mM. The molecular weight of the GOx immobilized in the column was found to be about 40 x 10(3) by gel filtration. The average distance of diffusion of the substrate from the active site was found to be about 55 nm by electron microscopy. The dimensions of the enzyme film were controlled by the deposition conditions and were measured to be about 20-45 nm in thickness by electron microscopy and about 70 nm in diameter by atomic force microscopy. The enzyme column retained its enzyme activity for more than two years and could be reused at least ten times.Q: Non-Lazy 'Join' in Data.Map.Strict data M a = M a (M a) (M a) join :: (M a -> M b) -> (M b -> M c) -> (M a -> M c) join m f = \ x -> x `f` (m x) instance (Compose f) => join' f where join' = compose. join instance (Functor f, Functor g) => join'' f g where join'' = join' instance Ord b => join'' Ord b where join'' = join' instance (Functor f, Functor g) => join'' f g where join'' = join' instance Foldable f => join'' f where join'' = join' instance (Functor f, Functor g) => join'' f g where join'' = join' instance (Functor f, Functor g) => join'' f g where join'' = join' instance (Functor f, Functor g, Functor h) => join''
